Project Sunrise

An Early Intervention
Program

Project Sunrise is a program of Cindy Haber Center, Inc.

Alabama's Early Intervention System

The Early Intervention program works together with families and service providers to assist in meeting the needs of infants and toddlers.

Some children need assistance in reaching developmental milestones. An evaluation can determine if a child may benefit from Early Intervention services.

Eligibility

A child is eligible for Early Intervention services if he/she is under 36 months of age and has a 25 percent or greater delay in one or more of the five major areas of development: Physical (Motor), Social/Emotional, Adaptive (Self-Help), Cognitive or Communication.

A diagnosis with a high probability of developmental delay can also be used to determine eligibility.

Evaluation

The evaluation will provide information about your child's current level of development. You and your family, the people who know and spend time with your child, as well as the professionals who work with your child will provide this information.

The evaluation is designed to identify strengths, needs, and services that your child and family may need.

Services

Services and therapy for a child who is eligible for Alabama Early Intervention services are available in the child's natural environment, which includes the child's home and child care setting.

The Service Coordinator is available to assist the family in locating resources and services available within the community.

Directory

The Alabama Central Resource Directory is provided by the Alabama Department of Rehabilitation Services. It is a directory of services available for children (birth to age 5) with developmental delays and/or physical disabilities.
